EVA Air Cargo takes first B777F

SEATTLE: November 08, 2017. EVA Air has taken delivery of the first of five B777 freighters. The airline plans to put the aircraft in service on routes between Asia and North America in late November.

EVA will take delivery of the additional four aircraft by September 2019. As it adds the new freighters, it will successively retire its five remaining 747-400 freighters by the end of 2019.

The airline's freighter destinations in Asia include Shanghai Pudong, Shenzhen, Chongqing, Hong Kong, Osaka, Singapore, Bangkok, Penang and Hanoi.

The company's air cargo gateways in North America are Los Angeles, San Francisco, Chicago, Dallas/Fort Worth and Atlanta.

EVA can use the new aircraft to fly airfreight from Taiwan to any destination in North America with one technical stop in Anchorage, Alaska.

EVA now provides airfreight services on 62 routes, including five dedicated cargo gateways, with 35 weekly freighter flights.

Energy-efficient and environment-friendly, the B777 freighter is expected to effectively reduce carbon emissions compared to the B747-400 freighter.

Both the B777 and B747-400 freighters accommodate the same-sized pallets and containers, providing the advantages of resource sharing and smoothing the cargo-loading process during EVA's transition to the newer aircraft.

EVA is now operating a fleet of 79 aircraft, including the new freighter.
